

"BUILD BRIDGE" DEMAND GROWS MORE URGENT

Merchants Regard Excuses of Commissioner as Puerile.

ONLY CHAOS IN SIGHT.

Approaches to Blackwell's Island Span Not Yet
Fully Planned.

NO STEP TO END STRIKE

How Lindenthal Is Alleged to Have Put Pennsylvania Railroad in Control.

Aroused by Bridge Commissioner Stevenson's practical admission that the city is at the mercy of the Pennsylvania Steel Company and that the work on the Blackwell's Island Bridge will probably remain untouched for an indefinite period, the members of the East Side Improvement Association to-day planned a more vigorous campaign.

"The Bridge Commissioner's report to the Mayor is the most remarkable thing I ever read," said M. J. Kenny. "What is the city going to do? Here's the steel company, with a strike clause in its contract and making no effort to come to terms with the workmen.
That's a fine thing for the Pennsylvania railroad, but what of the merchants and citizens in Manhattan and Queens?
The Pennsylvania Railroad owns the Pennsylvania Steel Company. The railroad mapped this thing out long ago.
It was the influence that put Lindenthal in as Bridge Commissioner. What did he do? He did nothing but tie up the bridge. It was Lindenthal who fixed it so that no concern in the world except the Pennsylvania Steel Company could build the bridge. He simply turned the whole structure over to the railroad monopoly so that it could prevent any competition in the Long Island traffic.

"Build the Bridge!" They Demand.
"But we are just waking up. We purpose to drag the nigger from the woodpile and build this bridge. We have started out to do it and we are going to do it."

Hundreds of merchants and citizens on the upper east side are literally "up in the air" because of the uncertain state of the Blackwell's Island Bridge.
Those particularly interested comprise the merchants within the range of the proposed approach. They do not know where they are at. So far, nothing has been done concerning an approach and the merchants do not know whether to arrange to move or to plan extensions.

Many leases are held open.

It developed to-day that another influence as strong as that of the Pennsylvania Railroad is bearing on the Manhattan approach end of the bridge.
It is no less a combination than Ryer and Belmont.

The Evening World learned to-day that several plans for the approach were submitted and cast aside because they did not meet with the wishes of the traction magnates. Altogether no less than twelve different schemes for giving the traffic a proper outlet have been rejected, and the question of an approach is as undecided to-day as it was before the bridge was suggested.

Under the Pennsylvania Company's contract the bridge must be completed by Jan. 1, 1908. There is no likelihood that it will be, but if it is it will unload a condition of perfect chaos on the upper east side. There will be nothing but a sixty-foot street to handle the traffic to and from it.

Condemnation Halts.
So far the Corporation Counsel has proceeded to condemn all the property east of Second avenue, between Fifth-ninth and Sixteenth streets. Mr. Delaney says the petition is in the hands of the Court, but the Commissioners have not been appointed. Nothing has been done about property west of Second avenue.

Last year the Board of Estimate and Apportionment appointed a committee of three engineers to suggest a plan for an approach. This committee consists of Nelson P. Lewis, chief engineer of the Board of Estimate, George S. Howe, chief engineer of the Rapid Transit Commission, and O. P. Nichols, consulting engineer of the Bridge Department. The committee has accomplished nothing.

Mr. Lewis said to-day that they were compelled to ask for an extension, owing to the unsettled condition of the rapid-transit plans for the east side and the condition of the street in Queens.

"Until the subway problem on the east side is finally settled we cannot do anything," said Mr. Lewis. "If there is to be a subway in Fifty-ninth street, that will further entangle the problem. Altogether, the approach to the Blackwell's Island bridge is one of the toughest problems before the city to-day.

"The present rapid transit plan is to place all north and south subway at the first level, and those east or west at the second level, or forty feet below the street. Something must be done to handle the traffic of the Blackwell's Island bridge. The Williamsburg Bridge taught a lesson that must be remembered.

Chaos Is Assured.
"If the bridge trains are to connect with the Manhattan subways, it will be a serious problem. Of course, something must be done immediately, for if the bridge is finished without an approach, there will be a condition of chaos at Second avenue and Fifty-ninth and Sixteenth streets. Whether the city will condemn property west of Second avenue for an approach or for a street widening, I cannot say. Of course, that is a serious question to property holders, because if it is taken for an approach there will be no assessment."

In his report to Mayor McClellan, the Bridge Commissioner stated that he hoped to have the strike question on the bridge settled in time to have the work pushed vigorously this summer.

In the branch office of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, at the Manhattan end of the Blackwell's Island bridge, no information regarding the strike could be obtained.

"Has any effort been made to settle the strike?" an Evening World reporter asked.

"We have nothing to say," was the answer.
Secretary Farrell, of the Ironworkers' Union, said that the ironworkers want $5 a day instead of $4.50, the old scale rate.

"We have nothing from the Pennsylvania Steel Company," he said.
Mayor McClellan declined to make any statement on report made to him by the Bridge Commissioner. It is understood, however, that he has instructed Mr. Stevenson to take immediate steps to have the work resumed on the bridge.

McClellan has not yet set a date for the reception of the committee from the East Side Improvement Association and the Queens County civilian organizations. It is likely that the appointment will be made for early next week.

Bates SHOE A SQUARE DEAL

In these days of graft, it pays a dealer to be honest with the public. A square deal in shoes is a certainty when you buy from your nearest dealer THE BATES SHOE—for men and women.

New York, the fashion centre of the world, has accepted THE BATES SHOE as the shoe that gives you the squarest deal. We know that THE BATES SHOE is a good shoe, we make it in our own factory. It is an honest shoe, sold at an honest price, and sold by an honest dealer.

There are over three hundred and fifty reliable shoe dealers in Greater New York selling THE BATES SHOE.
One of these dealers is in your immediate neighborhood, almost at your door, and the fact that he sells THE BATES SHOE stamps him as a square dealer.

If you desire the finest kind of workmanship—hand finished—ask for THE BATES Special.
